capybara kap-i-bä'rə, n the largest living rodent, a native of S America, resembling a large guinea-pig. [Port, from Tupí]

CAR abbrev: compound or compounded annual rate.

Car. abbrev: Carolus (L), Charles.

car kär, n a self-propelled wheeled vehicle designed to carry passengers (also motor car); a wheeled vehicle of a specified type (as jaunting-car, tramcar, etc); a railway carriage, esp of a specified type (as dining-car, sleeping-car, etc); any railway carriage, wagon or truck (NAm); the part of a balloon, cable-car, or airship that carries passengers and load; a chariot or cart (poetic). — car bomb an explosive device concealed beneath or inside a car, detonated by remote control or when the car engine is started; car'-coat a short coat designed for wearing in a car; car'fare (NAm) the fare on a bus, tram, etc; car ferry a ferry boat on which cars can be transported; — vt car'jack to hijack (a road vehicle and its occupants). — car'jacker; car'jacking; car'load as much as a car will carry; car'man (archaic) a man who drives a car or cart; a carter; car'park an open space or a building for parking cars; car phone a radio-operated telephone for use in a car; car pool an arrangement by which several car owners take turns in giving lifts to each other; a number of cars owned by a business for use by employees; car'port a covered parking space, esp a space under a roof projecting from a building. — adj car'-sick affected with nausea by the movement of a car. — car'-sickness; car'-wash a place specially equipped for the automatic washing of cars. — car boot sale a sale at which goods are sold direct from the boots of the owners' cars. [OFr carre, from LL carra, a Celtic word, seen in Irish carr, Breton karr] carabao kä'rə-bä-o, n the domesticated Asiatic buffalo. [Philippine Sp, from Visayan karaba'aw] carabid kar'ə-bid, n a beetle of the genus Carabus, of the ground-beetle family Carabidae (kə-rab'i-dē). — adj of, or characteristic of, the Carabidae. [Gr kārabos a kind of beetle] carabine. See carbine.

carabineer, carabinier. See carbine.

carabiner. See karabiner.

carabiniere kä-rä-bē-nyā'rā, (Ital) n a member of the Italian national police force: — pl carabinie'ri (-rē).

caracal kar'ə-kal, n the desert lynx of N Africa and S Asia, having long legs and black-tipped ears; its fur. [Fr, prob from Turk qara-qulaq black ear] caracara kä-rä-kä-rä', or kä-rä-kä'rä, n a name for several S American carrion-eating birds of prey. [Imitative]

caracol or caracole kar'ə-kōl, n a half-turn or wheel (dressage); a spiral staircase. — vi to turn half-round; to prance about. [Fr caracole, from Ital caracollo, from Sp caracol a spiral snail shell] caract kar'əkt, (Shakesp) n a mark; a sign. [Appar Gr charaktos marked]

carafe kə-raf', n a water-bottle or wine-flask for the table; the amount contained in a carafe. [Fr carafe, prob from Ar gharafa to draw water] caramba kär-äm'bə, (Sp) interj expressing admiration, annoyance or surprise.

carambola ka-rəm-bō'lə, n a small E Indian tree (Averrhoa carambola) of the wood-sorrel family; its acrid yellow pulpy fruit used for making tarts, preserves, etc. [Port] carambole. See under carom.

caramel kar'ə-mel, n a dark-brown substance produced from sugar by loss of water on heating, used in colouring and flavouring food and drink; a chewy sweet made with sugar, butter, etc. — adj made of or containing caramel; of the colour of caramel. — vt and vi to turn into caramel. — n caramelizā'tion or -s-. — vt and vi car'amelize or -ise. — Also (rare) car'omel. [Fr, from Sp caramelo] carangid kə-rang'gid or -jid, or carangoid -goid, n any spiny-finned marine fish of the genus Caranx, of the family Carangidae (kar-an'ji-dē), which includes the scads, jacks, pilot fish, etc. — Also adj. [Origin obscure] caranna kar-an'ə or carauna -ön'ə, n a resinous substance yielded by various S American burseraceous trees. [Sp caraña, from Tupí] carap kar'ap or kə-rap', n any tree of the genus Carapa, tropical trees of the mahogany family yielding car'ap-nuts, car'ap-oil or car'ap-wood (or crab'-nuts, -oil or -wood). [caraipi, the native Guiana name] carapace kar'ə-pās, n the thick hard shell, made of bone or chitin, of the crab, tortoise, turtle, etc; an inpenetrable outer shell, eg a reserved manner used as a protection against outside influences. — adj carapā'cial (-shl). [Fr, from Sp carapacho] carat kar'ət, n a unit of weight (metric carat = 200mg) used for gems; (also esp NAm karat) a unit used in expressing the proportion of gold in an alloy, 24-carat gold being pure gold; worth, estimate (obs). [Fr, from Ar qīrāt, perh from Gr keration a carob-seed used as a weight]

caravan kar'ə-van, or -van', n a covered van; a house on wheels; a company travelling together for security, esp in crossing the desert; a company of people; a fleet with convoy. — vi to travel in a caravan: — pr p car'avaning or car'avanning; pa t and pa p car'avaned or car'avanned. — n caravaneer' the leader of a caravan. — n caravan'er or caravann'er a caravaneer; someone who stays in a caravan, esp for holidays. — n caravanette' a motorized mobile home. — n caravanserai (-van'sə-rī) esp formerly in some Eastern countries, a kind of unfurnished inn or extensive enclosed courtyard where caravans stop. Also caravan'sarai or caravan'sary. — caravan site or caravan park an open space laid out for caravans. [Pers kārwān caravan, and kārwānsarāī from (sarāī inn)] caravance. See calavance.

caravel kar'ə-vel, n a light Mediterranean sailing-ship. [Fr caravelle, from Ital caravella; cf LL cārabus, Gr kārabos a light ship] caraway kar'ə-wā, n an umbelliferous plant (Carum carvi) with aromatic fruits (caraway seeds) used as a tonic and condiment. [Prob Sp alcaravea (carvi), Ar karwiyā, from Gr karon] carb kärb, (colloq) n short for carburettor.

carbachol kär'bə-kol or -kōl, n a synthetic drug used to disperse fluids, eg urine, retained in the body. [*carb*amic acid and choline] carbamate kär'bə-māt or kär-bam'āt, n a salt or ester of carbamic acid, used esp as a pesticide. — n carbamide

(kär'bə-mīd, kär-bam'īd) urea. — n car'baryl (-bə-ril) a carbamate insecticide. — carbamic acid an acid, CH_3NO_2, a half amide of carbonic acid. [carbon, amide and aryl] carbanion kär-ban'ī-ən, (chem) n an ion carrying a negative electric charge at the carbon position.

carbazole kär'bə-zōl, n a chemical compound derived from coal tar and used in making dyes.

carbide kär'bīd, n a compound of carbon with another element, esp calcium carbide. — carbide tool (eng) a cutting and forming tool used for hard materials or at high temperatures. [carbon] carbine kär'bīn, n a short light rifle. — Also (esp formerly) car'abin or car'abine. — n carbineer', carabineer', carbinier' or carabinier' a soldier armed with a carbine; a light cavalryman; a soldier of the 6th Dragoon Guards (from 1939, 3rd Carabineers). [Fr carabine] carbo- kär-bō-, sometimes kärbo'-, or before a vowel carb- combining form denoting carbon.

carbocyclic kär-bō-sī'klik, adj homocyclic. [carbon and cyclic] carbohydrate kär-bō-hī'drāt, n a compound of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, the last two being in the same proportion as in water; extended to similar compounds, the sugars and starches which form the main source of energy in food. [See carbon and hydrate] carbolic kär-bol'ik, n (in full carbolic acid) phenol. [L carbō coal, and oleum oil] carbon kär'bən, n a non-metallic element (atomic no 6; symbol C), widely diffused, occurring uncombined as diamond, graphite and buckminsterfullerene; a piece of carbon (esp an electrode or a lamp-filament), or of carbon paper; a carbon copy; a carbonado diamond. — Also adj. — adj carbonā'ceous coaly; containing much carbon; like carbon. — n carbon'atite an intrusive carbonate rock. — n car'bonate a salt of carbonic acid. — vt to combine or impregnate with carbon dioxide; to carbonize. — n carbonā'tion. — adj carbonic (-bon'ik) relating to carbon. — adj carbonif'erous producing carbon or coal; (with cap; geol) belonging to the Carboniferous System (see below). — n carbonizā'tion or -s-. — vt car'bonize or -ise to reduce to carbon; to char or coke; to cover with carbon. — vi to become carbonized. — carbon anhydrase an enzyme in living tissues that helps to transport carbon dioxide from the tissues to the lungs by acting as a catalyst in the reaction between carbon dioxide and water; carbon anhydride same as carbon dioxide (see below); carbon arc an arc between two carbon electrodes, used for high-intensity lighting; carbon black a form of finely divided carbon produced by partial combustion of hydrocarbons, used in making inks and rubber; carbon copy a duplicate of writing or typed matter made by interleaving carbon paper, a paper coated with a pigment made of carbon or other material; any exact duplicate. — vt car'bon-cop'y to copy exactly. — carbon cycle the circulation and transfer of carbon between animals, plants and the atmosphere; the function of carbon in various nuclear reactions in stars; carbon dating estimating the date of death of prehistoric organic material from the amount of carbon-14 still present in it; carbon dioxide an oxide of carbon (CO_2), a colourless, odourless, incombustible gas, present in the atmosphere, formerly called carbonic-acid gas, which in solution in water forms carbonic acid; carbon dioxide snow dry ice (see ice); carbonic acid (H_2CO_3) a weak acid; carbon disulphide (CS_2) a colourless, flammable liquid with an unpleasant smell, used in the manufacture of man-made fibres and solvents; carbon fibres very fine filaments of carbon used in bundles, bound together by resins, to form strong lightweight materials; car'bon-14 a radioactive isotope of carbon, used eg as a tracer element in biological studies or in dating archaeological material; carbon microphone a microphone in which variations in sound pressure produced in a diaphragm are detected in a current passing through carbon granules which register a decrease of contact resistance as the sound pressure increases; carbon monoxide (CO) a colourless, odourless, very poisonous gas which burns with a blue flame to form carbon dioxide; carbon process (photog) a printing process using paper sensitized with potassium bichromate and coated with gelatine and a pigment; carbon steel steel containing carbon, with different properties according to the quantity of carbon used; carbon tax a tax imposed on industry, and on the users of motor vehicles, to try to limit the amount of carbon being released into the atmosphere from the burning of fossil fuels; carbon tetrachloride (CCl_4) a solvent made from chlorine and carbon disulphide; car'bon-12 an isotope of carbon with a mass of 12, used as a standard in determining relative atomic and molecular weight. — the Carboniferous or the Carboniferous System one of the main divisions of the Palaeozoic rocks, formed between the Devonian and Permian, and including the Mountain or Carboniferous Limestone, the Millstone Grit, and the Coal Measures. [Fr carbone, from L carbō, -ōnis coal, charcoal] carbonado[1] kär-bən-ā'dō, n a piece of meat cut crossways for broiling on coals (obs); (also carbonnade' or carbonade') a beef stew made with beer: — pl carbona'does or carbona'dos. — vt to cut crossways for broiling (obs); to slash (obs). [Sp carbonada] carbonado[2] kär-bən-ā'dō, n a variety of black, opaque, crystalline carbon, harder than diamond, used in industry for drilling, etc. — Also called black diamond or black carbon. [Port, carbonated] carbonara kär-bə-när'-ə, n a pasta sauce made with eggs, bacon, cheese and cream. [Ital]

Carbonari kär-bon-är'ē, n pl members of a secret society in Italy at the beginning of the 19c, founded to help forward a republican government. — n Carbonar'ism. [Ital, literally charcoal burners] carbonyl kär'bə-nil, (chem) n the radical CO. — vt carbonylate (kär-bon'i-lāt) to introduce the carbonyl group into. — n carbonylā'tion. [carbon, oxygen and Gr hȳlē matter]

Carborundum® kär-bər-un'dum, n a silicon carbide, used as a substitute for corundum in grinding, etc. [carbon and corundum; a trademark in some countries] carboxyl kär-boks'il, n the radical COOH. — adj carboxylic (-bok-sil'ik). [carbon, oxygen and Gr hȳlē matter] carboy kär'boi, n a large glass or plastic bottle, with basketwork or other casing, used for containing or transporting dangerous chemicals. [Pers qarābah] carbuncle kär'bung-kl, n a mythical self-luminous gem; a fiery-red precious stone (almandine or precious garnet); a large pimple esp on the face or neck; a local inflammation of the skin and subcutaneous tissues, caused by bacterial infection; an architectural monstrosity or eyesore. — adj car'buncled set with the gem carbuncle; afflicted with carbuncles; having red inflamed spots. — adj carbun'cular belonging to or like a carbuncle; red; inflamed; unsightly. [L carbunculus, dimin of carbō a coal] carburet kär'bū-ret, or -ret', n a carbide (obs). — n carburā'tion, carburetion (-rāsh'ən, -resh'ən) or carburizā'tion or -s-. — vt carburet, car'burate or car'burize or -ise to combine with carbon; to charge with carbon compounds. — adj car'buretted (or -ret'id). — n car'burettor, carburett'er, or US car'buretor or car'bureter (also -ret'ər) an apparatus for charging a gas with carbon compounds, esp part of an internal-combustion engine in which air is mixed with volatile fuel in the desired proportion. — carburetted gas a mixed illuminant obtained by passing water-gas over hot hydrocarbons; carburetted hydrogen a compound of carbon and hydrogen such as marsh-gas or olefiant gas. [Fr carbure, from L carbō coal] carby kär'bi, n (Austr) short for carburettor.

carcajou kär'kə-jōō, n the glutton or wolverine. [Can Fr, prob from an Indian name] carcake kär'kāk, (Scot) n a kind of cake for Shrove Tuesday. [OE caru grief, and cake] carcanet kär'kə-net, (obs) n a collar of jewels; a jewelled head-ornament. [Fr (and obs Eng) carcan an iron collar used for punishment, from LL carcannum, from Gmc] carcase or carcass kär'kəs, n a dead body of an animal esp one to be used as meat; a live human body (disrespectful or facetious); the framework of anything; a ruin; an incendiary shell; the body of a tyre as distinct from the tread. — vt to put up the framework of; to make a carcase of. — carcase meat or carcass meat raw meat as prepared for the butcher's shop, not tinned. [OFr carquois (Fr carcasse) a skeleton] carceral kär'sə-rəl, adj of or relating to prison or a prison. [L carcerālis, from carcer prison] carcinogen, carcinogenic. See carcinoma.

carcinology kär-si-nol'ə-ji, n the study of crustaceans. — adj carcinological (-ə-loj'i-kl). — n carcinol'ogist. [Gr karkinos a crab, and logos discourse] carcinoma kär-si-nō'mə, n a cancer: — pl carcinō'mata or carcinō'mas. — adj carcinō'matous. — n carcin'ogen (-jen) a substance that encourages the growth of cancer. — n carcinogen'esis. — adj carcinogen'ic. — n carcinogenic'ity. — n carcinō'sis or carcinōmatō'sis spread of cancer in the body. [Gr karkinōma, from karkinos crab]

CARD sometimes kärd, abbrev: Campaign Against Racial Discrimination.

Card. abbrev: Cardinal.

card[1] kärd, a small, usu rectangular piece of cardboard or stiff paper; one with figures or symbols for playing a game; one with a person's name and address, with a greeting, invitation, message, etc (calling card, visiting card, Christmas card, birthday card, etc); a small piece of cardboard or plastic carrying information, showing membership or proof of identity, etc, either in print or on a magnetic strip (identity card, membership card, credit card, etc); a domino; the dial of a mariner's compass (also compass card); a map; a perforated plate used as a guide in weaving; a personal announcement in a newspaper or elsewhere (NAm); the programme of races at a race-meeting; a printed circuit board (comput); a punched card (comput); a person, usually qualified in some way, as in a knowing card (colloq); a comical or eccentric person; (in pl) a game played with cards. — vt to return on a scoring-card (golf); to enter in a card index. — adj card'-carrying openly expressing membership of or support for a party or group; orig holding a membership card of a party, etc, esp the Communist party. — card'case esp formerly, a case for carrying visiting cards; card'castle a structure of playing cards built one upon the other in storeys; any flimsy or precarious structure; card catalogue a card index; card column (comput) one of the eighty or ninety columns of a punched card with lines parallel to the short edge of the card (cf card row); card file a card index; card'-game any game played with playing-cards; card'-holder someone who has a membership card; hence a member of a club, organization, etc; card index one with entries on separate cards. — vt card'-in'dex. — card mechanic see under mechanic; card'phone a public telephone from which calls are made using a pre-paid plastic card rather than money; card'punch (comput) a machine which perforates cards to record data; card reader (comput) a device which reads the data represented by holes on a punched card and converts them to a form suitable for storage or processing; card row (comput) one of the rows of a punched card with lines parallel to the long edge of the card (cf card column); card'-sharp or card'-sharper a person who cheats at cards; card'-table a table for playing cards on; card'-vote a voting system that gives each delegate's vote a value in proportion to the number he represents. — a card up one's sleeve an advantageous factor or argument kept in reserve; cards in one's hands everything under one's control; cards on the table one's resources and moves freely laid open; cooling card (Shakesp) anything that discourages, or dashes hopes; get one's cards to be dismissed from one's employment; house of cards a card-castle, cards built up into storeys; any flimsy or precarious structure, scheme, etc; knowing card someone who is astute, sharp or wide awake; leading card a strong point in one's case; make a card to win a trick in a card-game; on the cards not improbable; likely to happen; play one's cards well (or badly) to make (or not to make) the best of one's chances; to act (or not to act) in a way that will bring one benefit or advantage; show (all) one's cards to expose one's secrets or designs, esp when giving an advantage to someone else by so doing; speak by the card to speak with precision and to the point; sure card someone who is wide awake; the cards are stacked against (someone or something) the circumstances, or facts, are ranged against (a person, an argument, etc); throw up (or in) the cards to give in; to admit defeat. [Fr carte, from L c(h)arta, from Gr chartēs paper; cf carte[2]] centimetre or (NAm) centimeter sen'ti-mē-tər, n a linear measure, the hundredth part of a metre. — adj centimet'ric having a wavelength of between one and ten centimetres. — centimetre-gram-second (abbrev CGS or cgs) formerly applied to a system of scientific measurement with the centimetre, gram and second as units of length, mass and time. [Fr, from L centum a hundred, and metre[2]] centimo sen'ti-mō or then'ti-mō, n a coin and monetary unit of Spain, Venezuela, Paraguay and Costa Rica, one hundredth of the standard unit of currency. [Sp] centi Morgan sen'ti mör'gen, (genetics) n a measure of the distance between the loci of two genes on the same chromosome obtained from the cross-over frequency and used in genetic mapping. [centi- and T H Morgan (1866–1945), US biologist] centinel or centinell sen'ti-nl, obs spellings of sentinel. — centinel (private) a private soldier.

centipede sen'ti-pēd, n any myriapod of the class Chilopoda, carnivorous flattened animals with many segments, each bearing one pair of legs. [L centum a hundred, and pēs, pedis a foot] centner sent'nər, n a unit of weight in Germany and Scandinavia equal to 50kg (110.23lb), or in Russia 100kg (220.46 lb); a unit of weight equal to 100lb (45.3kg) (also called in US short hundredweight). [Ger, from L centēnārius; cf centenary]

CENTO sen'tō, abbrev: Central Treaty Organization (formed 1959 to foster economic and military cooperation between UK, Iran, Turkey and Pakistan; disbanded 1979).

cento sen'tō, n a poem manufactured by putting together lines or passages of one author or of several authors; a composition formed by joining bits and pieces from various authors; a string of commonplace phrases and quotations: — pl cen'tos or cen'tones. — adj cen'tonate (bot) blotched, patchy. — n cen'toist or cen'tonist. [L centō, -ōnis, Gr kentrōn patchwork]

centre or (NAm) center, etc sen'tər, n the middle point of anything, esp a circle or sphere; the middle area of anything; a person or thing in the middle; a fixed point of reference; the point toward which all things move or are drawn; a nucleus or focal point; a resort; a stronghold; a meeting place; a place, institution, etc devoted to a specified activity; a part or area of the brain or nervous system that controls a specified action or function (physiol); a player in a central position (Rugby football, etc); a centre-forward (soccer, hockey, etc); the player in the centre of the offensive line, who starts the play by passing the ball through his legs to a backfield player (Am football); (a shot that hits) the ring around the bull's eye (archery); a political party, or its members, having moderate opinions; of a conic, the point through which all diameters pass (math); a rod with a conical tip for supporting a workpiece in a lathe or other machine tool (machinery). — vt to place on or connect to a centre. — vi to be placed in the middle; to have a centre; to lie or move in relation to a centre (often with on, or upon, round or around): — pr p cen'tring; pa t and pa p cen'tred. — adj relating to the political centre. — adj cen'tral belonging to, in, or near, the centre; principal, dominant, most important, essential. — n cen'tralism the tendency or policy of administering by the sovereign or central government matters which would be otherwise under local management. — n cen'tralist (also adj). — n centrality (-tral'i-ti) central position; dominance, the quality of being essential or principal. — n centralizā'tion or -s- the act or process of moving or drawing towards a centre; centralism. — vt and vi cen'tralize or -ise to move to, draw to, or concentrate at a centre. — adv cen'trally. — adj cen'tred positioned in the centre. — n cen'tring see separate article centring. — adj cen'tric relating to, placed in, or containing the centre; (of plants) cylindrical and tapering, terete. — combining form -cen'tric having a specified type of centre. — adj cen'trical. — adv cen'trically. — n cen'tricalness. — n centricity (-tris'i-ti). — n cen'trism the practice of sticking to the middle ground in politics; the holding of moderate, non-extreme political opinions. — adj and n cen'trist. — central angle (math) an angle bounded by two radii of a circle; central bank a state-owned or state-controlled bank which carries out government financial policy, regulates the money supply, influences interest rates and acts as a link between the government and the banking system; central conic a conic section that has a centre; central dogma the principle that the transfer of genetic information from DNA to the protein sequence is irreversible, ie it cannot flow from protein to DNA; central fire a cartridge having the fulminate in the centre of the base (also adj cen'tre-fire); central force (phys) the force on a moving body that is always directed towards or from a fixed point, the centre of force; central heating a system of heating a building by water, steam or warm air conducted throughout the building from one point; central locking in a motor vehicle, the automatic locking of all the doors as the driver's door is locked; Central Powers in and before the war of 1914–18, the German Empire and

Austria-Hungary; central processor see phrases below; central reservation a usu tarred or paved area in the centre of a motorway or major road acting as a division between traffic travelling in opposite directions; centre-back (soccer) the central player in the middle of the defence; the position of this player; centre bit a joiner's tool, turning on a centre, for boring circular holes in wood; cen'treboard a retractable keel fitted to small racing yachts and dinghies; cen'trefold or centre spread the two facing centre pages of a newspaper, magazine, etc; an article, design or set of photographs printed on these; a photograph of a nude woman or man printed on these; centre-for'ward (soccer, hockey, etc) the central player in the line of forwards; the position of this player; centre-half' (soccer, hockey, etc) the central player in the line of half-backs; the position of this player; centre lathe (eng) a machine tool for cutting metal in which the tool is held steady and the workpiece rotates; cen'treline an often imaginary line that divides a body or shape into two equal halves; cen'trepiece something placed at the centre, esp an ornament for the middle of a table, ceiling, etc; a central character or feature in a story, film, etc; centre punch a tool, a steel bar with a conical point, used for marking the centre of holes to be drilled; cen'tre-rail a rail between the ordinary rails on a railway track; centre spread see centrefold. — adj and adv centre stage in or to the centre of a theatre stage; at or to the position where (eg political, media, etc) attention is focused. — centre-three-quar'ter (rugby) one of the two players positioned in the middle of the three-quarter-back line; the position of these players. — Central European Time (abbrev CET) the standard time in W European countries, equivalent of British Summer Time, one hour ahead of Greewich Mean Time; central nervous system (zool) the main ganglia of the nervous system with their associated nerve cords, in vertebrates consisting of the brain and spinal cord; central processor or central processing unit (abbrev CPU) the part of a computer which performs the logical and arithmetical operations on the data and which controls other units of the computer system; central to essential, most important for the understanding or working of; centre of attraction the point to which bodies tend by the force of gravity or the like; centre of buoyancy or displacement the centre of gravity of the immersed portion of a floating body; centre of excellence a focal point, esp a university (or one of its departments), for work at the highest level (in a particular subject); centre of gravity the single point at which the resultant gravitational forces of a body act; centre of inertia or mass the point through which any plane divides a body into two parts of equal mass; centre of oscillation the point in a pendulum such that, if all the matter were concentrated there, the pendulum would have the same period; centre of percussion the point where the direction of a blow meets the plane in which lie the centre of inertia and a possible axis of rotation such that the blow imparts a rotation without pressure on the axis; centre of pressure the point on a surface immersed in fluid at which the resultant pressure may be taken to act (phys); the point at which the resultant of aerodynamic forces intersects the chord line of an aerofoil; centre of symmetry a point in a figure such that any straight line through it meets the figure in two points at equal distances on either side. [Fr, from L centrum, from Gr kentron a sharp point]

centric, etc. See centre.

centrifugal sen-trif'ū-gəl, sen' or -fū', adj tending away from a centre; conducting or carrying outwards from the centre, efferent (biol); using, or produced by centrifugal force; proceeding in development from the apex towards the base (bot). — vt centrif'ugalize or -ise (or sen', -fū') to subject to centrifugal force. — adv centrifugally. — n cen'trifuge (-fūj; also centrifugal machine) any machine which, using rapid rotation, separates substances of different densities by centrifugal force; any rotating device used for studying the effects of gravitational force and varying accelerations on humans and animals. — vt to subject to such rotation. — n centrifugation (-fū-gā'shən) or centrifugence (-trif'ū-jəns, sen' or -fū') centrifugal tendency or force; (centrifugation) centrifuge separation. — centrifugal force the resistance of a revolving body, by virtue of its inertia, to an acceleration towards the centre, equal and opposite to centripetal force; centrifugal machine a centrifuge; centrifuge separation the technique of isotope separation applied to the enrichment of ^{235}U in uranium (sometimes called centrifugation). [Ety as for centre, and L fugere to flee] centring or (NAm) centering sen'tər-ing or sen'tring, (building) n the framework upon which an arch or vault of stone, brick or iron is supported during its construction. — Also cen'treing.

centriole sen'trē-ōl, (zool) n a rodlike body (usu one of a pair) in animal cells that forms the centre of polymerization of the microtubules in certain thread-like structures, eg in sperm flagelli and the mitotic spindle. [New L centriolum, dimin of L centrum] centripetal sen-trip'ə-tl, adj tending towards a centre; conducting or carrying towards the centre, afferent, (biol); proceeding in development from the base towards the apex (bot). — n centrip'etalism. — centripetal force a force acting on a revolving body, causing it to tend inward towards the centre, equal and opposite to centrifugal force. [Ety as for centre and L petere to seek] centrobaric sen-trō-bar'ik, adj relating to the centre of gravity. [Ety as for centre, and Gr baros weight] centroclinal sen-trō-klī'nl, (geol) adj dipping towards a centre from all directions. [Ety as for centre, and Gr klīnein to lean] centrode sen'trōd, (math) n a locus traced out by the successive positions of an instantaneous centre of pure rotation. [Ety as for centre, and Gr hodos a path] centroid sen'troid, (math) n the point where the medians of a triangle intersect; the centre of mass. — adj centroid'al. [Ety as for centre, and Gr eidos form] centromere sen'trə-mēr, (biol) n the portion of DNA that attaches a chromosome to the spindle during cell division. [Ety as for centre, and Gr meros part]

Centronics interface sen-tron'iks in'tər-fās (comput), n a standard parallel interface for printers, etc.

centrosome sen'trə-sōm, (biol) n a small body found in the protoplasm of a cell, forming by division the two poles of the mitotic spindle. [Ety as for centre, and Gr sōma a body] centrosphere sen'trə-sfēr, (geol) n the central part of the earth below the crust, the barysphere.

centrum sen'trəm, (anatom) n the main part of a vertebra: — pl cen'trums or cen'tra. [L] centry[1] sen'tri, n centre (Shakesp); centering (obs).

centry[2]. An obs spelling of sentry.

centum sen'təm or ken'tōōm, n a hundred. — centum languages the group of Indo-European languages in which an original palatal consonant appears as a guttural sound, as in L centum hundred in which the 'c' is sounded 'k' (cf satem languages); centumvir (sen-tum'vir; L vir a man) one of the Roman judges chosen annually for civil suits, orig 105 in number (three from each of the thirty-five tribes): — pl centum'virī. — n centum'virate. [L centum a hundred] centuple sen'tū-pl, adj hundredfold. — vt to multiply or increase a hundred times. — n centuplicā'tion. — adj centū'plicate. — n one of a hundred like things or copies. — vt to centuple. [L centuplus and centuplex, from centum hundred, and plicāre to fold] century sen'tū-ri, n a set or series of a hundred, esp of consecutive years (usu reckoned from the conventionally accepted date of Christ's birth), runs at cricket, or Roman soldiers — adj centū'rial. — n centuriā'tion division into hundreds. — n centū'riātor one of a group of 16c Reformed divines of Magdeburg who compiled a church history in 13 volumes, each volume covering a century. — n centū'rion in the ancient Roman army, an officer who had the command of a hundred men; a person who has scored or achieved a hundred in any way. — century plant an agave (Agave americana) of Mexico and southern US which flowers only once in many years. [L centuria a century, from centum a hundred]

ceòl mór kyol mōr or mör. Same as pibroch. [Gaelic, great music] ceorl chā'örl or kā'örl, n in England before the Norman Conquest, an ordinary freeman of the lowest rank. [OE ceorl; see churl] cep sep, n a type of edible mushroom of the Boletus genus with a brown shiny cap and white underside. [Fr cèpe, from L cippus a stake]

cepaceous si-pā'shas, (bot) adj smelling or tasting of onion or garlic. [From the species name of the onion, Allium cepa]

cephal- sef'əl-, si-fal'-, kef'al- or ki-fal'-, or cephalo- combining form denoting head. — adj ceph'alad (zool and anatom) situated near, facing towards, or passing to the head. — adj ceph'alate having a head. — adj cephal'ic of or belonging to the head. — n a remedy for headache. — -cephal'ic and -ceph'alous adjectival combining forms. — adj ceph'alous having a head. — n cephalag'ra (Gr agrā a catching) gout in the head. — n cephalal'gia (Gr algos pain; med) headache. — adj cephalal'gic. — n Cephalas'pis (Gr aspis shield) an Upper Silurian and Old Red Sandstone genus of extinct fishes or fishlike animals (ostracoderms) with a head-shield. — n cephalin (biochem) a compound of phosphorus found in the brain and nervous tissue (also kephalin). — n cephalī'tis inflammation of the brain. — n cephalizā'tion or -s- in animal evolution, the specialization of the anterior end or head as the site of the mouthparts, sensory organs and principal ganglia of the central nervous system. — n cephalocele (sef'əl-ə-sēl; med) the protrusion of the membranes of the brain through a hole in the skull. — n cephalochordate (-ō-kör'dāt; Gr chordē cord) a member of the subphyllum Cephalochordata, of chordate fishlike animals (including the lancelets and amphioxus), having a persisting notochord projecting beyond the nerve cord to the end of the snout. — n cephalom'etry (med) the measurement of the foetal head in the uterus, by ultrasound or radiology; the measurement of the head by x-ray, esp in orthodontics. — n ceph'alopod (-pod; Gr pous, podos foot) a member of the Cephalopoda (-op'od-ə), the highest class of molluscs, usu large, exclusively marine animals (including cuttlefish, squid, octopus, etc), with the foot modified into arms or tentacles surrounding the mouth. — n cephalospō'rin any of a group of wide-spectrum antibiotics derived from the fungus Cephalosporium. — n cephalōtho'rax the fused head and thorax in some arthropods. — n cephalotomy (kef-al-ot'ə-mi; Gr tomē a cut) the dissection of the head. — cephalic index the ratio of the breadth to the length of the skull expressed as a percentage; cephalic presentation the usual position of a child in the womb just before birth, head downwards. [Gr kephalē head]

Cepheus sē'fūs or -fē-əs, n a northern constellation named after Andromeda's father, a mythical king of Ethiopia. — Cepheid variable (sē'fi-id; astron) any star of the type of the star d Cephei ('classical' cepheid) or of a similar short-period star of the 'cluster type', from whose rhythmically varying brightness its distance can be inferred, this characteristic being important for the determination of distance scale in the universe. [Gr Kēpheus]

ceramic se- or ke-ram'ik, adj relating to a ceramic or to ceramics; made of a ceramic. — n ceram'ic any product that is first shaped and then hardened by means of heat, or the material from which it is formed (esp traditional potter's clay, but also a large range of modern materials of quite different composition; (in pl) articles made of ceramic material. — n sing ceram'ics the potter's art; the science or study of ceramic materials. — n cer'amal a cermet. — n ceram'ist or ceram'icist a person who makes a scientific study of clays and other ceramic materials, or who puts them to practical use. — n ceramog'raphy the description or study of pottery. — n cer'met a material made from a combination of *cer*amic particles and a *met*al matrix, used in aeronautics and engineering; a type of electronic resistor made of such material. — ceramic hob a type of cooking surface on an elecric cooker, consisting of a flat ceramic plate with heating elements on the underside; ceramic oxide a combination of an inorganic material with oxygen having superconducting qualities at high temperature. [Gr keramos potter's earth]

cerasin ser'ə-sin, n the insoluble portion of cherry-tree gum. [L cerasus, Gr kerasos the cherry-tree] cerastes se-ras'tēz, n any venomous viper of the genus Cerastes, esp the N African horned viper, with a horny process over each eye: — pl ceras'tes. — n ceras'tium any low ground-covering plant of the genus Cerastium, including the alpine mouse-ear chickweed, with horn-shaped capsules, and Cerastium tomentosum, snow-in-summer. [Gr kerastēs, from keras a horn] cerat- ser-ət-, or cerato- ser-ət-ō-, combining form denoting horn. — See also kerat- or kerato-. [Gr keras, -atos horn]

ceratitis. Same as keratitis (see under keratin).

ceratodus ser-at'ō-dəs, n (a fossil of) any extinct lungfish of the genus Ceratodus, of the Cretaceous and Triassic periods; the barramunda, an Australian lungfish, formerly included in the genus, but now classified Neoceratodus. [Gr keras, -atos horn, and odous tooth] ceratoid ser'ə-toid, (anatom) adj having the form or texture of a horn. [Gr keratoeidēs, from keras horn, and eidos form] ceratopsian ser-ə-top'si-ən, or ceratopsid -top'sid, n a member of a large group of bird-hipped, plant-eating dinosaurs of the late Cretaceous, having armoured neck-frills and horns or beaks, the best known example being Triceratops. — Also adj. [Gr keras horn, and ops face]

Ceratosaurus ser-ə-tō-sö'rəs, n a flesh-eating dinosaur of the Jurassic period. [Gr keras horn, and sauros lizard]

Cerberus sûr'bər-əs, n the monster that guarded the entrance to Hades, a dog with three heads (mythol); a grim, dangerous and watchful guardian. — adj cerbē'rian or more correctly cerbē'rean. — a sop to Cerberus see under sop. [L, from Gr Kerberos] cercal. See cercus.

cercaria sər-kā'ri-ə, (zool) n the final larval stage of many trematode worms: — pl cercā'riae. — adj cercā'rian. [Gr kerkos a tail] cercopid. See froth-fly under froth.

cercopithecid sûr-kō-pith'ə-sid or cercopithecoid -koid, n any of several Old World long-tailed monkeys of the genus Cercopithecus, including the Diana monkey, vervet, and moustached monkey. [Gr kerkos tail, and pithēkos monkey] cercus sûr'kəs, n a tail-like appendage, esp a flexible sensory organ at the tip of the abdomen in certain arthropods: — pl cerci (-sē). — adj cer'cal relating to a tail. [Gr kerkos tail] cere sēr, vt to cover with wax; to wrap (a dead body) in cerecloth. — n the bare waxlike patch at the base of the upper part of a bird's beak. — adj cērā'ceous waxy. — n cēr'ate a medicated paste or stiff ointment containing wax (med). — adj cēr'ated (of a bird) having a cere. — adj cēr'eous waxy. — adj cerif'erous (biol) producing wax. — cere'cloth or cerement (sēr'mənt) a cloth dipped in melted wax formerly used to wrap a dead body in; any burial clothes. [L cēra wax] cereal sē'ri-əl, adj of crops, etc, relating to edible grain. — n a grain used as food, such as wheat, barley, oats, etc; a food prepared from such grain, esp any of the various breakfast foods. — n cē'realist a specialist in cereals; a feeder on cereals. [L cereālis of grain or agriculture, from Cerēs Roman goddess of corn] cerebellum ser-i-bel'əm, n the lower posterior part of the brain, whose function is to co-ordinate voluntary movements and maintain balance: — pl cerebell'a or cerebell'ums. — adj cerebell'ar, cerebell'ic or cerebell'ous. [L, little brain, dimin of cerebrum] cerebrum ser'i-brəm, n the front and larger part of the brain; loosely, the whole brain: — pl cer'ebrums or cer'ebra. — adj cer'ebral (also sə-rē'brəl) relating to the brain or the cerebrum; intellectual, as opposed to practical; of consonant sounds, produced by inverting the tip of the tongue on the palate (phonetics). — n cer'ebralism the theory that all mental operations originate in the brain. — n cer'ebralist. — vi cer'ebrate to think, to use the brain. — n cerebrā'tion action of the brain, esp unconscious. — adj cer'ebric (or sər-eb'rik) cerebral. — adj cereb'riform brain-shaped. — n cerebrī'tis inflammation of the cerebrum. — n cer'ebroside any of various lipids found in nerve tissue. — adj cerebrōspīn'al relating to the brain and spinal cord together. — n cerebrotonia (-tō'ni-ə; L tonus tone) the temperament associated with ectomorphic body type characterized by introversion and hypersensitivity. — adj cerebrōton'ic. — adj cer'ebrōvas'cūlar relating to the cerebrum and its blood vessels. — cerebral cortex the outer layers of the cerebral hemispheres associated with higher function of the nervous system; cerebral death see brain death under brain; cerebral dominance the tendency of one side of the brain to dominate certain functions, eg the left side of the cerebum produces right-handedness in the majority of people; cerebral haemorrhage haemorrhage of a blood vessel or blood vessels in the brain, esp the rupture of an artery; cerebral hemisphere one of the two lateral halves of the cerebrum; cerebral palsy a form of congenital paralysis marked by lack of muscular co-ordination, etc; cerebrospinal fever meningitis; cerebrospinal fluid the clear colourless fluid that surrounds the spinal cord and ventricles in the brain; cerebrovascular accident a sudden interruption of the blood supply to the brain, as in a cerebral haemorrhage. [L cerebrum the brain; prob cognate with Gr karā the head, and krānion the cranium]

ceremony ser'i-mə-ni, n a rite; a formal act, custom, convention, etc; such rites, acts, etc regarded collectively; pomp, formality, etc. — adj ceremonial (-mō'ni-əl) relating to or of the nature of ceremony or a ceremony. — n an act that conforms with custom or convention; a set of formal rituals or actions; (a book containing) a prescribed order of service or ritual (Christian relig). — n ceremō'nialism adherence to formality or custom — adv ceremō'nially. — adj ceremō'nious given to ceremony; particular in observing formalities; precise, punctilious. — adv ceremō'niously. — n ceremō'niousness. — master of ceremonies the person who directs the form and order of the ceremonies to be observed on some public occasion, eg a banquet; a compère; stand on ceremony to be punctilious about formalities; without ceremony informally; without adhering to conventions, customs, etc. [L caerimōnia sanctity]

Cerenkov radiation cher-en'kof (or -yen'kof) rā-di-ā'-shən, (phys) n the bluish light emitted by a beam of charged particles passing through a transparent medium at a speed greater than the speed of light through that medium. [From P A Cerenkov (born 1904), Russian physicist]

Ceres sē'rēz, n the Roman name for the Greek Demeter, goddess of agriculture and corn; the largest asteroid (minor planet). [L Cerēs, -eris, prob from root of creāre to create] ceresin or ceresine ser'ə-sin or -sēn, n a kind of hard, whitish wax prepared from ozokerite and used as a substitute for beeswax. [L cera wax] cereus sē'ri-əs, n any of several species of columnar American cacti of the genus Cereus, having spiny stems with pronounced ribs, and including some species that grow to 9m (30ft) in height. [L cēreus waxen, wax-taper (from their stiff form)] cerge sûrj, n a large wax candle burned before the altar. — Also clerge or serge. [OFr, from L cēreus, from cēra wax] ceria, ceric. See cerium.

ceriferous. See cere.

Cerinthian sər-in'thi-ən, adj relating to Cerinthus, one of the earliest heretics in the Christian Church, against whose crude Gnosticism the Gospel of John was written, according to Irenaeus.

ceriph. See serif.

cerise sər-ēz', also -ēs', n and adj (a) light and clear purplish red. [Fr, cherry] cerium sē'ri-əm, n a metallic chemical element (atomic no 58; symbol Ce), one of the rare-earth metals. — n cē'ria its oxide. — adj cē'ric or ce'rous of or containing cerium. — n cē'rite a mineral, its hydrous silicate. — cerium metals a group of rare-earth metals including cerium, lanthanum, neodymium, samarium, promethium and praseodymium. chroma krō'mə, n quality of colour; a hue; (in colour television) the colour component of a signal. — n chrō'mate a salt of chromic acid. — adj chrōmat'ic relating to, or consisting of, colours; coloured; relating to notes in a melodic progression, which are raised or lowered by accidentals, without changing the key of the passage, and also to chords in which such notes occur (music). — adv chrōmat'ically. — n chrōmat'icism (music) the state of being chromatic; the use of chromatic tones. — n chrōmaticity (-tis') the colour quality of light, one method of defining it being by its purity (saturation) and dominant wavelength. — n sing chrōmat'ics the science of colours. — n chrō'matid one of the two thread-like structures formed by the longitudinal divison of a chromosome. — n chrō'matin a readily stained substance in the nucleus of a cell made up of DNA, RNA and proteins. — adj chrōmatograph'ic. — n chrōmatog'raphy methods of separating substances in a mixture which depend on selective adsorption, partition between non-mixing solvents, etc, using a chrōmat'ograph, and which present the substances as a chrōmat'ogram, such as a series of visible bands in a vertical tube. — n chrōmat'ophore (biol) a pigment cell, or a pigment-bearing body in protoplasm or photosynthetic bacteria. — n chrōmatop'sia (Gr opsis sight) coloured vision. — n chromatosphere see chromosphere below. — n chrō'matype or chrō'motype a photographic process that uses chromium salts; a photograph in colours; a sheet printed in colour. — n chrome chromium or a chromium compound. — Also adj. — vt (in dyeing) to treat with a chromium solution; to plate with chromium. — n chrō'mel an alloy of nickel and chromium, used in heating elements. — n chrō'mene a chemical compound produced by certain plants that acts as an insecticide. — adj chrō'mic relating to trivalent chromium. — n chrōmid'ium an algal cell in a lichen; a free fragment of chromatin: — pl chrōmid'ia. — n chrō'minance (TV) the difference between any colour and a reference colour (usu a white of specified chromaticity) of equal luminance. — n chrō'mite a mineral, a double oxide of chromium and iron. — n chrō'mium a metallic element (atomic no 24; symbol Cr) remarkable for the beautiful colour of its compounds. — n chrō'mō (colloq) a chromolithograph: — pl chrō'mos. — n chrō'mogen a substance that can be made into a dye; a coloured compound containing a chromatophore. — n chrō'mōgram a combination of photographs in different colours to give an image in natural colours. — n chrōmōlith'ograph a lithograph printed in colours. — n chrōmōlithog'raphy. — n chrō'momere (biol) one of the characteristic granules of compacted chromatin which appear on a chromosome during the early stages of meiosis. — adj chrō'mophil or chrōmophil'ic staining heavily in certain microscopic techniques (biol). — n chrō'mophore the group of atoms in a chemical compound responsible for its colour. — adj chrōmophon'ic. — n chrō'mōplast (bot) a chromatophore. — n chrō'mōscope an apparatus for combining coloured images. — adj chrōmosō'mal. — n chrō'mōsome a rod-like portion of the chromatin of a cell nucleus, performing an important part in mitotic cell division, and in the transmission of hereditary characters. — n chrō'mōsphere a layer of incandescent gas surrounding the sun through which the light of the photosphere passes (also chrōmat'osphere). — n chrōmōther'apy colour therapy using three primary colours — red, green and violet. — n chromotype see chromatype above. — n chrōmōtypog'raphy printing in colours. — n chrōmōxy'lograph (Gr xylon wood) a picture printed in colours from wooden blocks. — n chrōmōxylog'raphy. — chrō'makey (TV) a special effect in which a coloured background can be removed from a picture and a different background substituted; chromatic aberration the blurring of an optical image, with colouring of the edges, caused by light of different wavelengths being focused at different distances; chromatic adaption (bot) differences in amount or proportion of photosynthetic pigments in plants in response to the amount and colour of available light; chromaticity co-ordinates (phys) numbers whose values are used to specify a colour; chromaticity diagram (phys) a diagram on which the chromaticity of a colour is plotted; chromatic scale (music) a scale proceeding by semitones; chrome alum a violet-coloured crystalline substance, used as a mordant in dyeing; chrome leather leather prepared by chrome tanning; chrome plating electroplating with chromium; chrome spinel picotite; chrome steel an alloy steel containing chromium; chrome tanning tanning with salts of chromium; chrome tape magnetic tape coated with chrome dioxide; chrome yellow a pigment of lead chromate; chromic acid an acid of chromium (H_2CrO_4), of an orange-red colour, much used in dyeing and bleaching; chromosomal aberration any visible abnormality in chromosome number or structure; chromosome mapping the assigning of genes to chromosomes and the determination of their exact position on the chromosome; chromosome number the number of chromosomes in a cell nucleus, constant for any given species. [Gr chrōma, -atos colour] cryo- krī'ō- or krī-o'-, combining form denoting frost, ice, ice-cold. — adj cryobiolog'ical. — n cryobiol'ogist. — n cryobiol'ogy the study of the effects of extreme cold on living organisms. — n cryoc'onite (Gr konis dust) dust found on the surface of polar ice. — n cry'ogen (-jen) (Gr root of gignesthai to become) a substance used for obtaining low temperatures, a freezing mixture. — adj cryogen'ic relating to the science of cryogenics, or to work done, apparatus used, or substances kept, at low temperatures. — n sing cryogen'ics the branch of physics concerned with phenomena at very low temperatures. — n cryogeny (-oj'ə-ni) refrigeration; cryogenics. — n cryoglobulin (-glob'ū-lin; med) an immunoglobulin formed in the blood in certain diseases which forms obstructions in small blood vessels when the extremities are subjected to low temperatures. — n cry'olite (Gr lithos a stone) an ice-stone or Greenland spar, sodium aluminium fluoride, earliest source of aluminium. — n cryom'eter (Gr metron measure) a thermometer for low temperatures. — adj cryomet'ric. — adj cryon'ic. — n sing cryon'ics the practice of preserving human corpses by freezing them, with the idea that advances in science may enable them to be revived at some future time. — adj cryophil'ic (Gr phileein to love; biol) able to thrive at low temperatures. — n cryoph'orus (Gr pherein to bear) an instrument for showing the decrease of temperature in water by evaporation. — n sing cryophys'ics low temperature physics. — n cryoprecip'itate a precipitate, eg from blood plasma, produced by freezing and thawing under controlled conditions. — n cryopreservā'tion the preservation of living cells (eg blood, human eggs and sperm) by freezing; cryonics. — n cry'oprobe a fine instrument with a cooled tip used in cryosurgery. — n cry'oscope an instrument for determining freezing-points. — adj cryoscop'ic. — n cryos'copy the study of the effect of dissolved substances on the freezing-points of solvents. — n cry'ostat apparatus for achieving or demonstrating cooling by evaporation; any apparatus for maintaining a low temperature. — n cryosur'geon a surgeon specializing in cryosurgery. — n cryosur'gery surgery using instruments at very low temperatures to cut and destroy tissue. — n cryother'apy or crymother'apy (krī-mō-) medical treatment using extreme cold. — n cry'otron a tiny form of electronic switch operating in a bath of liquid helium a few degrees above absolute zero. — cryonic suspension cryonics. [Gr kryos frost] crypt kript, n an underground cell or chapel; a small cavity, a tubular gland (zool). — adj cryp'tal relating to, or of the nature of, a crypt. [L crypta, from Gr kryptē, from kryptein to hide; cf grot] crypt- kript-, or crypto- -ō- or -o-, combining form denoting hidden. — n pl cryptadia (krip-tā'di-ə; Gr) things to be kept secret. — n cryptaesthesia or (NAm) cryptesthesia (kript-ēs-thē'zyə or -zhə; Gr aisthēsis perception) supranormal perception, eg clairvoyance. — adj cryptaesthet'ic. — n cryptanal'ysis the art of deciphering codes, etc. — n cryptan'alyst. — n crypto-Chris'tian. — n crypto-comm'unist. — n cryptococcō'sis a rare infection caused by the fungus Cryptococcus neoformans, which, if inhaled, may cause meningitis and growths in the lungs. — adj cryptocryst'alline with crystalline structure visible only under the microscope. — n cryp'togam any member of the Cryptogamia (krip-tō-gā'mi-ə), a former class of flowerless plants (including mosses, ferns, etc) that reproduce by means of spores rather than seeds. — adj cryptogā'mian. — adj cryptogamic (-gam'ik). — n cryptog'amist. — adj cryptog'amous. — n cryptog'amy. — adj cryptogen'ic (of diseases) of unknown or obscure cause. — n cryp'togram or cryp'tograph anything written in cipher. — n cryptog'rapher or cryptog'raphist. — adj cryptograph'ic. — n cryptog'raphy. — adj cryptolog'ical. — n cryptol'ogist. — n cryptol'ogy secret language; the scientific study of codes. — n cryptomē'ria the Japanese cedar, Cryptomeria japonica. — n cryptomnesia (-mnē'zi-ə or -zhə) latent or subconscious memory. — adj cryptomnēs'ic. — n crypton see krypton. — n cryp'tonym (Gr onyma name) a secret name. — adj crypton'ymous. — n cryptor'chid a male human or animal in whom one or both testes fail to descend into the scrotum. — n cryptor'chidism. — n cryptosporidiō'sis an infection affecting humans and domestic animals, caused by the protozoan cryptosporid'ium (pl -id'ia), and characterized by diarrhoea, fever and stomach pains. [Gr kryptos hidden] cryptic krip'tik, adj hidden; secret; unseen; mysteriously obscure. — adj cryp'tical. — adv cryp'tically. — cryptic coloration (zool) protective resemblance to some part of the environment by countershading or mimicry (eg of leaves or twigs). [LL crypticus from Gr kryptikos, from kryptos hidden] crypto krip'to, n a person who is secretly a member of a party, sect, organization, etc, eg a crypto-communist: — pl cryp'tos. [crypt-] crystal kris'tl, n rock-crystal, a clear quartz, like ice; a body, generally solid, whose atoms are arranged in a definite pattern, outwardly expressed by geometrical form with plane faces; a crystalline element, of piezoelectric or semiconductor material, functioning as eg a transducer, oscillator, etc in an electronic device; a globe of rock-crystal or the like in which one may see visions (also crystal ball); anything bright and clear; a superior glass of various kinds; cut glass; a watch-glass; cocaine or amphetamine (drug-taking slang). — adj composed of or like crystal. — adj crys'talline (-in, -in, or in poetry also -tal') like crystal or a crystal; composed of crystal, crystals, or parts of crystals; having the structure of a crystal. — n a crystalline substance. — n crystallin'ity. — n crys'tallite a small, imperfectly formed or incipient crystal; a minute body in glassy igneous rocks. — n crystalli'tis inflammation of the crystalline lens. — adj crystalli'zable or -s-. — n crystallizā'tion or -s-. — vt and vi crys'tallize or -ise to form into crystals; to make or become definite or concrete; (esp of fruit) to coat with sugar crystals. — n crystallogen'esis origination of crystals. — adj crystallogenet'ic. — n crystallog'rapher. — adj crystallograph'ic. — n crystallog'raphy the science of the structure, forms and properties of crystals. — n crys'talloid a substance in a state in which it dissolves to form a true solution which will pass through a membrane; a minute crystalline particle of protein (bot). — adj like a crystal; of the nature of a crystalloid. — n crys'tallomancy (Gr manteiā divination) divination by transparent bodies. — adj crys'tal-clear very or completely clear. — crys'tal-gazer, crys'tal-gazing gazing in a crystal or the like to obtain visual images, whether in divination or to objectify hidden contents of the mind; crystalline heaven or sphere in ancient astronomy, a sphere between the fixed stars and the primum mobile, assumed to explain precession of the equinoxes; crystalline lens the transparent refractive body of the eye; crystal rectifier a rectifier that depends on differential conduction in doped semiconductor crystals; crystal set a simple early type of wireless receiving apparatus having a crystal detector; crystal therapy the use of crystal energies or vibrations to treat physical or emotional problems; crystal violet an antiseptic dye, hexamethylpararosaniline hydrochloride (also gentian violet). [OFr cristal, from L crystallum, from Gr krystallos ice, from kryos frost]

CS abbrev: Chemical Society; Christian Science; Civil Service; Clerk to the Signet; Court of Session; Czechoslovakia (IVR). — See also CS gas.

Cs (chem) symbol: caesium.

c/s abbrev: cycles per second (hertz).

CSA abbrev: Child Support Agency; Confederate States of America.

csárdás chär'däsh, n a Hungarian dance, or its music, in two movements, one slow and the other fast. — Also (wrongly) czar'das. [Hung]
